MR. COLLINS' MESSAGE

Congratulations and best wishes to the graduates of 1941 of North Quincy High School. May you glory in achievements of your school years and anticipate the joy of meeting successfully the challenging issues of the future. To live in the hearts of your friends and associates is but to continue the motive of your school life wherein you have endeavored to be a constructive force in the promotion of group ideals and, at the same time, gather for your own use those contributing factors for personal development.

The general theme of your year book apparently concerns "candid camera shots" and portrays real issues of "snap judgments" as revealed in pictures. How excellent it is to so order, plan, and arrange our lives that we may be ever ready for the instant judgments of our on-lookers. Be ready for the candid camera with the positive assurance that normally, at least, it can only reveal its picture in favorable terms. As the camera does not falsify, neither should your character as expressed in a camera "shot."

The school extends to you its appreciation for your efforts in its behalf. It also wishes to offer any further assistance it may render for your best interests.

James S. Collins, Principal

ODE

*Ahead the future lies: we know not what it holds
Of golden hours and goals attained and hard-won victories,
Of black defeat and shattered hopes and eons of despair.
A parting of our ways, an end of friendships formed
By common task and pleasure shared in happy hour
May here perhaps take place, when we set out upon That highway—new, untried, a challenge to our youth and high ideals.*

NORTH'S football squad under the able leadership of Coach Jack Donahue, and assisted by Coach Jack Mullarkey, enjoyed a fairly good season having concluded the schedule with an even fifty per cent win and loss record. In the first encounter of the season the team suffered a crushing defeat at the hands of a powerful Dedham High eleven but quickly avenged themselves with a four-touchdown shutout over Milton. In the following game Weymouth High humbled the Raiders by a smashing blitzkrieg attack in the final half, but, undaunted, the Northerners handed an invading Thornton Academy eleven, which had previously but one defeat in three years against its record, a surprising one-point setback to earn North's "41" football squad a trip to Maine this coming fall. The Red and Black then picked up another Victory at Hingham but fell before a surprisingly powerful and invading Norwood bunch a week later. The fourth setback came from Whitman High, a newcomer to the North schedule, which gained the verdict by a slim margin of three points. North came from behind to tie and then overcame Framingham High after the Whitman upset and thus entered "The" game of the season, an underdog to a raging Quincy High eleven. Led by co-captains Eddie Cooke and Eddie Swindler, however, the Raiders played out a scoreless deadlock with the Blue and White and undoubtedly gained a moral although not a technical victory. Thus was concluded a good season for a squad that was forsaken at the opening game but for the squad that has paved the way for a most successful coming season.

WHEN the football season finally opens, what is the second thing that you think of? (Naturally our first thought must be for the broad shouldered he-men of the team). Of course, you think of the Cheerleaders. No game would be complete without North's peppy group of Cheerleaders out there rooting for the team and making the field re-echo with cheers. These peppy girls seem to be able to jump around like so many grasshoppers for hours and still be just as fresh as most of us poor mortals feel early in the morning. (This is a very good but rather difficult way to keep the waist-line down.) When North makes a touch-down, these human barometers are likely to do almost anything imaginable from handstands and cartwheels to backflips. We couldn't get along without this enthusiastic bunch of girls; so let's give three cheers for our cheerleaders.

CHEERLEADERS

BOWLING

THREE afternoons every week a group of eager boys and girls may be seen hastening from North as soon as school is over. "Why are these lads and lassies in such a great hurry?" wonders a passer-by. Were he to follow them he would soon find the reason for their haste, for they only go as far as the Norfolk Bowling Alleys. Here under the able direction of Mr. Sylvia, many a bowling champion of tomorrow gets his lowly start. Bowling has become one of the most popular sports during the past few years. No longer is it a man's game for now everyone bowls. Men and women, girls and boys, all take a try at knocking over a few pins. At first these novice bowlers make very little work for the pin-boys, but by the end of the year Mr. Sylvia usually manages to turn them into fairly good bowlers. The highlights of the bowling teams season come with the Tournament in April when they may show how much improvement they have made, and with the trip to Nantasket which the whole team enjoys.

IN his fourth year as the able mentor at North, Coach Mullarkey, with little or no material with which to work, developed this year a threatening although not too powerful hoop machine which completed another hectic season with nine wins in sixteen attempts in interscholastic competition. In this home and home arrangement North failed to down but two schools in its program. These were Quincy High, North's arch-rivals and Tech Tourney-ists this year, and Rockland High, one of the most powerful quintets on the South Shore. The Raiders divided honors with Braintree, Weymouth, and Watertown and took double wins from Quincy Trade, Hingham, and Abington. All this season the fans in the cheering section have applauded the excellence of the spectacular exhibits of basketball ability furnished by the Raider sophomores, to whom Mr. Mullarkey looks for a Tech bid or two in the coming two years.

BASKETBALL

RIFLE CLUB

THE Rifle Club this year is a group of about twelve boys. Under the able direction of Mr. Beede, these boys shoot every Thursday at the Quiney High School. They hope that by next year they will have a range of their own at the Quiney School. Two rifles and all ammunition as well as targets are provided by the government for the use of the Club. There was some consternation in the Club when they feared for a while that Mr. Beede might be drafted. Fortunately, however, he is still with them. Under his direction the boys soon become good marksmen and have shot several matches with other schools. Most of their shooting is done lying flat on the ground but later the boys learn to shoot kneeling and standing as well. The officers are Hunter MacDonald, president; Jack Ryan, vice-president; and Roy Leopold, secretary-treasurer.

WHEN you see several eager girls going up to the Quincy school at two-thirty, after school some night, it isn't because they were sent back there to learn their ABC's. No, they are one of the several groups that go there after school one night a week to practice a cupid act. After the first three or four lessons under Mr. Clark's excellent instruction, the beginners can count scores instead of just finding out how many times they hit the target at all. When the warm weather comes the girls go out on the front lawn. They try to get in enough practice before this great event so that they will not look too foolish as they are watched by many of the students who come out later than 2:45. These fair Robin'Hoods' have a grand time shooting and all agree with enthusiasm that archery beats all sports for real fun.

ARCHERY

RIDING CLUB

THE Riding Club is one of North's most active organizations. Indeed it has become so popular that it now has three divisions: beginners, intermediates, and advanced riders. The members ride once a week in the spring and fall through the beautiful bridle paths of the Blue Hills. In the fall, Ferguson's Riding Academy holds a gymkhana in which the girls compete in a horsemanship contest, play "Going to Jerusalem" and have balloon battles, egg-on-a-spoon races, and costume relays—all on horseback! On their last ride in the spring, the girls ride up to Chickatawbut, which gives a grand view of the neighboring hills and the ocean.

NORTH QUINCY'S baseball coach, Harold Forest, looks forward to a pretty good season this year although there is a grave scarcity of material resulting from last year's graduation. The only lettermen from last year's varsity nine are Artie Smith, the only veteran hurler, George Merrill who established an enviable batting record last year, George Wallace, also a good man at the plate, and Bill Gardner, the only infielder who is sure of his position. The catching will probably be taken care of by Eddie Swindler, and George Merrill, who also has eyes on that spot behind the plate, will probably be back in the outfield. Artie Smith will form the basis of the hurling staff and will be aided by John White, Joe Andrews, and Paul O'Brien, while Bob Sager may help before the end of the season. The schedule this year will be the same as in the past with one exception. Brockton has dropped from the Raiders' schedule and has been replaced by Thayer Academy. Milton, Weymouth, Braintree, and, of course, Quincy, will complete the North docket with, we all hope, a majority of victories for the Red and Black.

BASEBALL

GOLF

THE golf team is another sports activity sponsored by our popular football leader Mr. Jack Donahue. At the start of last year's golf schedule, Mr. Donahue made a statement to the effect that he was not expecting much of last year's squad because they were all unseasoned amateurs. Much to the surprise of all, however, the golf team came up in second place in the district tourney and only lost first place because one player was disqualified in a single match. From last year's surprising squad there are five out of six letter men returned for action this year. Led by Wheeler "Doc" Dunbar the team hopes to go to the top this year and should in all probability be an entrant in the State finals in June. The other varsity men are John Noble, "Kenny" Ertel, "Artie" Richards, and George Berard, leaving the spot open for the most capable "hacker." This should be the second year that North will be represented in the state and if all goes well that "should" will quickly be changed to "is."

TENNIS

THIS year marks a long step forward in net circles with the announcement that the North tennis team has entered the newly formed South Shore High School Tennis League. Made up of teams representing Braintree, Hingham, Milton, North Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth the new loop promises more exciting matches and keener competition than has heretofore prevailed.

The chances of the Red and Black netmen in this first year of league competition are not very bright. Of the crack outfits of the past two years Coach Joseph G. Foy has only one veteran available, the steady Bud O'Connell. Around the slick-stroking Bud an entire new unit must be built and chances of North's success are none too bright this year. Six new players must be chosen from a large group of candidates, none of whom has before participated in a match. Prominent among the candidates for berths on the squad are Corliss Graham, Dave Young, Len Purpora, Phil Hirtle, Warren Nicol, Jack McNamara, Bob Thompson, Jim Cruikshank, Jeff Eastman, Fred Haggett, Muir Grant, Paul Suk, Dick Wentling, and Bob Hewins. Bob Jones and John Verity manage the team.

SAILING CLUB

THE nautical-minded at North meet each week under the direction of Mr. Le Cain of Quincy, organizer of our Sailing Club. The members of this club are taught the basic principles of navigation, such as how to differentiate between types of sailing aids, and how to chart a course. The titles given the officers of the Sailing Club are quite appropriate, for they are those of Commodore, Vice-Commodore, Rear Commodore, and Secretary-Treasurer.

BOTH the student at North who openly declares that he'll never rush headlong to turn on a program of radio singing or break two or three limbs hurrying to a concert, and the student who coos and sighs blissfully for a week after he has heard some vocal entertainment have to admit that North's Glee Club is nothing to sneeze at and something to praise. It's come about that turkey and the big football game, and later on Santa Claus and Christmas pies somehow aren't complete without the customary pre-holiday broadcasts of our Glee Club. Later on, even Spring Fever doesn't daunt this club, and year after year we find ourselves boasting of the Glee Club's excellent rating in the Annual New England and State Music Festivals, as well as thoroughly enjoying the club's yearly concert with an unmistakable feeling of pride and admiration. All in all, everyone, at North whether he prefers high opera to "Frenesi" or "Frenesi" to high opera, has to admit that North's Glee Club tops both.

GLEE CLUB

BAND

DURING the first few weeks of school, the fourth-floor corridor thunders with crashing cymbals and beating drums, a familiar sound to the old-timers of this great institution—that of our colorful, lively, and hard-working band. Within a few weeks, the precise stepping and snappy tunes become a common sight at the practice stadium (and wherever the band goes, there also go its many admirers). Life and sports at North would certainly be tuneless and unrhythmical if it weren't for this fine musical organization, which plays at all football games, rallies, assemblies, and musical festivals.

The long hours spent in practice by the members reap benefits, however, as the band seldom fails to bring home excellent ratings from the Massachusetts and New England Music Festivals. Its annual spring concert strikes a key note of musical excellence that an enthusiastic audience always thrills to. The past year, the Band elected Guy Page president, Barna Sprague secretary and treasurer, and Ted Walter business manager.

THE orchestra sounds good? Well, thank you! You know, people don't realize the hours we put in on this music. "A please!" And, "Again from the repeat sign." Familiar words, but they get the desired effect. We do enjoy playing for your assemblies and special events, especially graduation. And we really don't mind missing classes for those long, hot rehearsals. Then there are the music festivals at which we manage to have both fun and a good rating. It's amazing how all those sour ragged notes in the Music Room become sweet and smooth at the festivals. Our officers are proud of their orchestra and we're proud of them. Guy Page, President; Barna Sprague, Vice-President; and Barbara Phillips, Secretary.

ORCHESTRA

DRUM MAJORETTES

CONFUCIUS say "Sight for black eye is beef-steak, sight for sore eyes is doctor, but sight for everyone's eyes is North's Drum Majors"—and we at North agree with him. It's like looking for a needle in a hay-stack to find a snappier bunch of drum-majors anywhere—and we know, for when our peppy high-steppers march proudly down the field at football games to the music of North's band, with their batons flashing and their whirling actions showing off to full advantage their gay and decorative costumes, they totally eclipse any other group of drum majors. Then, some time after the exciting football season is over, everyone is held spell-bound by the drum majors' extraordinary performance at the annual band concert, and North's usual triumph at the musical festival is partly duly accredited to that same group of baton twirlers. So you see, wise old Confucius knows what he's talking about when he says—"Sight for everyone's eyes is North's Drum Majors."

WE in the string ensemble have made a few sour notes (and many sweet ones), but our experiences have all been of the nicest kind. There are only nine of us, but the fun we've had playing at various affairs makes up for our small group. Speaking of fun, remember the Senior Class Play, the Honor Society Induction, and the many assemblies for which we've made music? Then we've "stringed" at church programs, women's club meeting, and P. T. A. gatherings all here in Quiney. And for all these good times we thank you, Miss Beesley. You've helped us to become real musicians and real friends. All the luck, in the world to your new string ensemble of ninth and tenth grade girls.

STRING ENSEMBLE

LIBRARY STAFF

THE Library Staff under the direction of Miss Sherman, is one of North's most popular organizations, for it combines service with pleasure. The members efficiently fulfill the many duties required of librarians, such as stamping books, putting books away properly, giving out study permits, and answering numberless questions of the pupils. Just as any other club has its elections of officers, business meetings, and social affairs, so has the Library Staff. One of its most anticipated events is the Mothers' Tea, at which the pupils and their mothers become better acquainted.

LET us turn baek the pages of the eal-endar and have a look in the Quiney Y. M. C. A. on some Thursday evening in November. What do we see? There is a handsome young North student roeking a baby doll to sleep in his arms (no names will be mentioned) and a large group of fellows and girls sitting around enjoying the fun. Why, it's the joint meeting of Tri-Hi-Y and Hi-Y, the high-light of the year for the all girls' organization. The elub, ably direeted by Miss Ruth Stevens and Mr. James Hardy, meet every other Thursday at the "Y" where they enjoy speakers, movies, and other types of entertainment. Many of the members attended the Older Girls' Conferenee this year in Hyde Park where they not only had a good time but reeeived inspiration as well. If you don't believe that the Tri-Hi-Y girls enjoy themselves, just look at their smiling faees coming out of the Quiney Y. M. C. A. some Thursday night.

TRI-HI-Y

YOUTH CONCERT

SPEAKING as the bus driver who takes the boys and girls to Symphony Hall, I'd like to tell you a little about these trips. On six Wednesdays (eagerly awaited) a group of North students get on my bus. What a happy racket follows! They're on their way to Symphony and there are members of the band, glee club, and orchestra, as well as those music lovers who don't belong to any of these organizations. After the concerts, there is the rustling of program notes, and the chatter about Mr. Wheeler Beckett, the conductor of their Youth Concerts, and about what he said concerning the beautiful music. The students are so very enthusiastic about the seventy-five musicians who give them these concerts that all they talk about is the fine music all the way home. Do you know, these pupils have me wishing I were a "youth" not a bus driver!

THE Motion Picture Operators' Club, sponsored by Mr. Christiansen, does much to make our classes and assemblies interesting. Its members are taught how to use the equipment North has, and frequently render service. At its bi-Monthly meetings, plans for the future are made, and entertainment, (usually movies or recordings) is provided. The recent full length movies obtained and shown after school by the Club have proved very popular.

MOTION PICTURE OPERATORS' CLUB

SCIENCE AND PHOTOGRAPHY CLUB

UNDER the new name of "Science and Photography Club," we meet an old friend in a new guise. The members of the Photography Club under the direction of Mr. French, voted to take this new name as this year some time has been devoted to scientific subjects, as well as to photography. The club gives to many pupils an opportunity to further their own interests and to render service to North. Members of the club have well represented our school by their prize-winning entries in photography contests and exhibitions.

THE Senior Student Council is North's most active and most important service organization. It has twenty-one members, elected from the three upper grades, who choose their own officers: tradition has given the office of president to a senior boy. Besides the appointing of new traffic squad, cafeteria squad, and grounds' patrol, and taking charge of school elections, the council renders many services to other organizations and to the school as a whole. This year's biggest accomplishments were the publication of the new handbook and the successful January Jump. Plans are now under way for the "After High School Conferences."

STUDENT COUNCIL

HI-Y CLUB

THIS is one of those exclusive Clubs at North which no girl no matter how intelligent or beautiful may join, for membership is restricted to boys from grades ten, eleven, and twelve. Meetings for business purposes are held at school, but the meetings which the boys enjoy most are the bi-monthly ones at the Y. M. C. A. Then they enjoy games, talks, and motion-pictures. This year the Hi-Y was entertained by Quincy High's Tri-Hi-Y. (Did you find the Quincy girls any more interesting than those at North, boys?) From all reports both clubs had a very pleasant evening. This year the officers are Leonard Sawyer, President; Bill Hutt, Vice-President; Charles Wood, Secretary; and Robert LeBlanc, Treasurer. The Hi-Y is under the able direction of Mr. James Hardy, and the boys who belong all agree that it is one of the best organizations in the school.

HAVE you ever experienced the thrill of being officially honored before a large group of students? It is something worth striving for, don't you agree? That is exactly what happens toward the close of the school year to a selected few from the Junior and Senior classes who are outstanding in character, scholarship, leadership, and service. Yes, anyone who possesses these qualifications is certainly deserving of recognition. The college student has Phi Beta Kappa; North has the Honor Society. The organization has an annual social get-together at the home of Mr. Frank E. MacDonald, faculty adviser. A second highlight of the year is the impressive induction ceremony which is witnessed by a part of the student body. How the honored ones are envied when they are presented with the golden pins signifying membership, and each person in the audience is inspired to study hard and remember the four standards—Character, Scholarship, Leadership, and Service!

HONOR SOCIETY

C. D. CLUB

WHAT does C. D. mean? Such is the mystery which has baffled North students ever since the C. D. Club was first organized last year. What? Clam Diggers? No, no, you're way off—but then, that's the secret which only members can know. However, the work of the C. D. Club is no mystery. Everyone knows that it is one of the most active groups in the school. For instance, just listen to this. The members, composed of students interested in the various fields of education, start off the year with a bang by enjoying an outing on the Cape. Then, the year is crammed full of interesting meetings with well-known speakers as well as field trips to various colleges around Boston. The club, under the able leadership of Miss Mable Pratt, does very important service work including tutoring and blackboard help for teachers. Their work in making National Education Week a success deserves special praise. Yes, you must certainly agree that there is no mystery about the importance of the C. D. Club in school life at North.

YOU can usually find the music-lovers tuning a violin or trumpet in 402, the sport fans playing baseball or basketball in the gym, and the book-worms browsing around the library, but you find the members of the Reporters Club everywhere covering everything. Their job is to get news for the weekly column in the Quincy Ledger, and you'll find them jotting down "Who-What-Where-When-How" about every little piece of news. The club, with Mr. Foy at its head, is divided into several groups: some of the members walk around with ears wide open trying to pick up bits of gossip for the "Hearsay" column; others take charge of the "Scoops," that is, the big events at North; some keep an attentive eye on every club; and still others duly write up every athletic event, hunt for items to put in the alumni section, review library books, and so forth. All in all, the members find out everything that's going on, and see to it that they're on the scene ready to jot down "Who-What-When-Where-Why."

REPORTERS CLUB

GROUPS PATROL

PAPERS, papers, papers—in an unceasing stream they flow from careless hands as restless students fly out for a little fresh air at lunch-time. Soon, thinks the unknowing bystander, North will be lost under a huge pile of assorted candy and ice cream papers. But no! All is not lost. Here come Mr. Sylvia and his well trained squad the Grounds Patrol to the rescue. This active group perform a real service at North, for, were it not for their unceasing vigilance, the grounds in front of the school would indeed be a sorry sight. These brave officers face the wrath of their colleagues as they order them to pick up papers and in spring very carefully keep everyone off the soft new grass. While we may resent the Grounds Patrol when a member slips up apparently out of the blue and orders us to pick up the piece of paper we just dropped, we realize, on thinking it over, that he is right and are really thankful that the beauty of our school is so well guarded.

STAMPS! F. D. R.'s hobby right at our own North! On Tuesdays a most animated group of stamp enthusiasts trade stamps á la the ancient barter system. Big stamps, little stamps, old stamps, new stamps, U. S. stamps, foreign stamps await their fate in neat candy or antiquated cigar boxes. The taint of a southern auction is in the air: An all-around bustle and b-z-z-z hovers o'er head, hobbyists race around the room towards a prospective buyer or trader, a heated argument ensues, a climax draws near. A trade! Charlie Spink Wadle gets a Wala Wala commemorative from William Fuzzyedge for his World's Fair edition! They part, each satisfied, until the meeting next Tuesday in the first floor side.

STAMP CLUB

CRASH! And here we find another dejected looking bowl of corn chowder carelessly sprawled for about a square yard on the cafeteria floor, presided over by a slightly reddened maiden just about to meet her doom in the midst of embarrassment when along comes one of our cheerful cafeteria hostesses to rescue our blushing miss from her most embarrassing position. Too late! There goes Mary's milk again thoughtlessly drenching all of our geometry papers, but cheer up! Here comes another heroine to save the day with her pleasant-looking dish rag. And so throughout the days we have our cheerful, alert cafeteria squad members ever willing to lend us a helping hand.

CAFETERIA SQUAD

TRAFFIC SQUAD

IMAGINE our school as a little city. Can't you see each room turn into a building, every corridor turn into a street, the music room and assembly hall into theaters, the cafeteria into a restaurant, and the library into a city library? And even as a city has policemen to keep a city orderly, so North has a Traffic Squad for helping us to behave. We have eighty policemen from the tenth, eleventh, and twelfth grades and if you're bad, woe unto you, for you go to jail! That's the detention room where many an offender has sung "The Prisoner's Song." There's a captain for each squad and a squad for each floor. But instead of getting tickets for speeding, we get detention slips for running! So let's all be good citizens and obey our policemen.

THESE PAST SIX YEARS

'36—Do any of us possibly remember how disappointed we all were 'way back in seventh grade when we were "farmed out" instead of being at North? Our survival was doubtful when we learned we were going to miss sewing and shop and changing rooms and other such pleasures. The only contact we had with the school that year was the weekly math exam (as regular as the weather) and the quarterly English tests. They're still with us, just as awe inspiring though that fact is hidden under a blasé veneer.

How we used to lord it over the grammar school "kids"! We thought (and still do) that we were really something, and when we attended an assembly at North, we were almost bursting with pride. Mussolini in all his glory couldn't hold a candle to us in that period of life.

The year with the boys in knickers and the girls in braids slowly elapsed. Before we realized it, June was upon us, and North was only two months away. Armed with report cards studded with A's we were prepared to besiege the formidable fortress of our fancy.

'37—After basking through the summer in rapturous anticipation, we were rudely and abruptly awakened in September. Not that we didn't love setting out each morning with our little brown paper bags, a book or two (merely for display of course) under our arms, not that we didn't wait for noon expectantly so that we might congregate in the cafeteria and discuss the brand new wing, the public address system, the guidance period and other innovations startling to us; not that we didn't have loads of fun in the gym where we were actually allowed to swing on the ropes or play with the shiny new basketballs; but our skin used to crawl, our palms itch and our faces grow red and flustered at the looks we received from the upper classmen. We had agreed to be friendly with them in a condescending sort of way if, of course, they didn't bother us too much or get in our way. Instead we received the most blood curdling looks that we interpreted as meaning: "Is it possibly a human being or just a biological mistake?"

By February we had become fairly accustomed to such snobbery when we were introduced to an animal far more terrifying. Its name was algebra, and did it used to puzzle us! Today's seniors spent countless hours in attempting to add A and B and C and get apples for an answer but never wholly succeeded.

In spite of this many of us decided to select the college course while the choice of others lay in another direction: commercial or civic, domestic or industrial.

'38—We now had only one more year left in junior high school. We even had begun to practice the looks we'd use on the seventh graders the next year.

Lots of us were busy as bees this year. We scampered around with nomination papers, and if we survived the preliminary, we tried to round up votes for election, for we really had a class organization for the first time. We suddenly became class conscious, but our enthusiasm was slightly dampened when we realized we were the class of 1941. In those days 2000 didn't seem much farther away.

We were still struggling with algebra, but we had also made the acquaintance of a still stranger academical puzzle. Compared to Latin algebra was our lollipop. The five cases completely befuddled us, and all those verb endings were no cinch. At the same time that we were following Marcus' adventures we also read avidly of Ivanhoe's attempts to win Lady Rowena and silently jeered old Shylock, one of Master Shakespeare's charming characters.

We came partially out of our scholastic fog, however, to attend our prom. We spent more of our time discussing the fact that Betty Jones came with Johnny Smith than we did tripping the light fantastic. The best thing about that dance was the slightly soft ice cream and the cake with the gooey frosting so you can see we were still slightly immature.

On the very hottest day of the year we diligently, if not musically, rendered "Alma Mater" for our perspiring parents and formally shook the dust of minority and childhood off our heels. We were ready for senior high whether it was prepared for us or not.

'39—Our joy at being sophomores was slightly curtailed when for the first time in school history a Quincy football team beat us, but badly. Somehow our Thanksgiving turkey didn't taste quite so delicious as usual. However, we bounced back to normal when the school's best basketball team was invited to the Tournament at M. I. T. We actually made the headlines in the Boston papers that usually completely ignore the South Shore.

Scholastically, Caesar was giving a very vivid account of his actions—what an egotist that guy must have been!—John Ridd was rescuing Lorna Doone, and every time we used a typewriter the keys were in a different place. We really felt worldly when we rolled a few foreign expressions off the tip of our tongues although it's extremely doubtful if the French or German would ever have recognized our efforts as being in their language. Others of us had elected biology, and what their accounts of the entrails of a frog lacked in accuracy they made fun or in gore.

All and all, we were happy as sophomores although we still had our eyes on the seemingly unattainable goal of someday being a senior.

'40—Only a year left to go. So that our senior class program might run on greased wheels, we again had a class organization. Having profited by the mistakes of their freshman year and being sadder and wiser (supposedly) and also older, our class officers were better equipped to transact our obligations. They supervised a highly successful dance. And seven of the class were on the Senior Student Council.

We had little time, however, to enjoy the fleeting hours of our junior year. Most of us were taking five major subjects and oh, what misery! We hardly realized there was such a thing as fun. The chemistry students managed to finish the course without any of their curious compounds exploding, but from the strange tales they related, the rest of us wondered how. Others were painfully finding out what the U. S. was about 'way back in grandpop's day. When thoroughly in a fog of names and dates we were profoundly grateful Columbus hadn't taken his sailboat ride any earlier.

About the only delightful thing about this year, except the victory over Quincy, was the vacations. They were more refreshing to us than an oasis to a desert traveller and twice as welcome. Remember how the greatest blizzard in our memory gave us two extra holidays in our February siesta. That smashed a record, but we gloomily predicted that it wouldn't set a precedent.

With spring our feelings began to pick up. Some of us were thrillingly excited at finding out we'd been picked for the Honor Society. The Girls' Club (after the nightmare of initiation), the Tri-Hi-Y, the Hi-Y, and the traffic squad made the coming year seem rosier than ever.

Then with bated breath we waited for that fateful night when the present twelfth grade was graduating, and we would officially be the Seniors.

'41—In appearance we had changed considerably in the past six years, for the braids and knickers were gone, but in mental development the transformation was even greater. In seventh grade we had regarded a senior as a kind of heavenly body, second cousin to an angel, as it were, surrounded by an aura of wonder and charm, but we soon discovered that in our teachers' opinions that idea was a total eclipse. However, in spite of our disillusionment, we've enjoyed our rather exalted position during this, our last year at North. The seventh graders seemed smaller than ever, and we bestowed upon them the glares we'd been practicing and preserving since our infant days.

The first concrete proof that we were really honest-to-goodness seniors came to us when we beheld the class play, The Three Cornered Moon. We had vaguely known it was being prepared, but on beholding it, we recognized, with no slight surprise, that the actors were our classmates and suddenly felt grown up.

During the hustle and bustle of Christmas holidays the taking of class pictures really began in earnest. Although we entered the photographer's sanetum sanetorum with trepidation, his friendly manner soon put us at ease. We all received the most curious sensation of our lives when we beheld our proofs. At discovering what we really looked like, we were tempted to end it all, but in some way or other the pictures seemed to grow on us and became by their familiarity, if not such as to increase our egotism, at least bearable.

The Girl's Club semi-formal was one of the year's outstanding social events. Imitating the custom of sophisticated New York society no one arrived until an hour after the appointed time. The cafeteria was cleverly decorated, all the embellishments centering around the theme, a Crystal Ball. The marvel of it all was that the decorations lasted as long as they did. The girls in their frothy festival frocks presented a colorful swirling scene that was not soon forgotten by all who beheld it.

Time and again we thanked our lucky stars that our five majors had been carried the year before. It made cold shivers run up and down our backs merely to visualize the predicament we would have been in if we hadn't.

Now, with the appearance of our very own Year Book, we're looking forward to our last month of school, to our class day, to the prom, and most of all to commencement. Yet the history of our class really isn't ending. In fact, we're confident that it's just beginning, for in the future its individual members will gain not only the success of achieving wealth and fame but also the success of living honest and upright lives that will make the class immortal in the annals of the school.

The big night! It was before curtain time and under that inch-thick mask of magic make-up we were all so nervous that even our most experienced actor, Willie Whipple, wore his rakish pork-pie at a slightly worried angle. Tom McCarthy and Bill Molloy seemed to have lost their customary nonchalance and impishness which had turned several of our rehearsals into circuses. (These same rehearsals also entailed honest-to-goodness hard work, for we can well remember afternoons which lengthened into a chilly 6:00 P.M. and we will always hear those dreaded words: "All right, third act again, and more life, please!") Bernie O'Donnell, Joyce

CLASS PLAY

Smith, and Carl Tobey were calmly (?) discussing the pros and cons of three-cornered romance under footlights and grease paint. Conclusion: All work and no play makes Bernie, Joyce, and Carl dull people. Meanwhile, Rita McFarland and Nora Long were frantically searching for the string beans, which, it developed, were in Willie's traveling bag. Trailing our long-suffering coach was Jane McLaughlin helping to test the prop doors to see if the set were going to collapse. This precaution was really quite needless, for we all knew the scenery would fall apart if it chose. (And it certainly never threatened.) Then suddenly, the curtain, and we were on. A mass of faces, that first line, the first act, applause, second, third acts—and it was over. Then flowers, congratulations, and the glad feeling that all our work had been worthwhile. Thank you, Mr. Hofferty, for all the things we learned and for all the fun we had. And we won't ever forget Life With Father, the first professional play which many of us had ever seen. It was a fitting ending to a most memorable interlude in our high school lives.

CLASS WILL

LEST we be forgotten we, the Class of 1941 of North Quincy High School, City of Quincy, County of Norfolk, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being of lawful graduating age, of sound and disposing mind and memory do hereby make, publish, and declare this to be our Last Will and Testament. After payment of our just class debts and graduation expenses we dispose of our estate as follows:

ARTICLE I

We give and bequeath to Mr. Collins a bottomless "pot of gold" in partial payment of our never-ending debt of gratitude and appreciation for his kindly and thoughtful efforts in our behalf.

ARTICLE II

We give and bequeath to Mr. MacDonald one pair of rubber-tired roller skates in order to make his ceaseless tours of the cafeteria during lunch periods effortless. We also stipulate that these skates have a bell attached that rings automatically so that errant pupils may have ample warning of his arrival.

ARTICLE III

We give and bequeath one volume, tried and tested, of Shakespeare's famous classic to all would be Romeos and Juliets of the Class of 1942.

ARTICLE IV

We give and bequeath to Miss Christman a mechanical robot to silently and quickly fold and replace the chairs in 401.

ARTICLE V

We give and bequeath to Miss Webstersmith a newly perfected magic eye especially adapted to discover any and all mistakes that might be found in the mounds of make-up papers that are ever present on her desk.

ARTICLE VI

We give and bequeath to Mr. Smoyer who has so often threatened to cut off all communication with the rest of the school one set of wire clippers for the telephone and a padlock for each door of his room.

ARTICLE VII

We give and bequeath to the Class of '42, as privileged characters, automatic locker lights, like those in refrigerators, so that they will have no difficulty in discovering whose locker they are in.

ARTICLE VIII

We give and bequeath to Miss Berry one television set to save her many needless inspection tours of the cafeteria to see if her workers are attending properly to their work at hand.

ARTICLE IX

We give and bequeath to Mr. Hofferty one of the latest movie cameras, recently acquired from G. M. G., so that future graduating classes may present a perpetual reminder of their dramatic ability to their posterity.

ARTICLE X

We give and bequeath one shiny new red scooter to each member of the new Traffic Squad to facilitate his prompt arrival at and departure from class. To this squad we also leave automatic traffic signals in order that the officers may spend more time in conversation.

ARTICLE XI

We give and bequeath to Mr. Mullarkey a new type basketball rim, recently perfected in 428 by secret formula, that automatically draws the balls to and through it from any part of the gym.

ARTICLE XII

We give and bequeath to Mr. Alexander, who has always been kind and patient with all his students, a gross of sophomores who will understand that their aunt's dog isn't the only one in history to have that, somehow or other, disliked name, "Caesar."

ARTICLE XIII

We give and bequeath to Mr. Bridges paper patterns of all his students which he may tear limb for limb instead of the originals when the spirit moves him.

ARTICLE XIV

We give and bequeath to Miss Sherman the combined services of J. Edgar Hoover and Dick Traey to locate the books that so mysteriously disappear and the persons who so penuriously manage to avoid paying their fines.

ARTICLE XV

We give and bequeath a double-decker detention room to all the teachers so that twice as many pupils may be made to endure that endless hour after school.

ARTICLE XVI

We give and bequeath to all future occupants of 319 during study periods an automatic opener and shutter of windows in an attempt to settle the disputes that arise between the pupils about the proper temperature of the room.

ARTICLE XVII

We give and bequeath to Mr. Jaek a life's subscription to the "Old Farmers' Almanac" to be used when scheduling Quincy games.

ARTICLE XVIII

We give and bequeath to the Class of '42 the smile that glistens and gleams and the skin you love to touch in order to obtain class pictures worthy of Tana Lurner or Tobert Raylor.

ARTICLE XIX

We give and bequeath to all future seventh graders a prominent and conspicuous desk presided over by the current senior sage to play "Information, Please" with them.

ARTICLE XX

We give and bequeath to next year's Hi-Y Club a carton of Wheaties and a hundred cans of spinach so that they won't look as pale and wan as has been customary after the collection of the Thanksgiving and Christmas offerings.

ARTICLE XXI

We give and bequeath a thundering salvo of applause to Mr. Forest for his fine performances this year and last in the Q. T. A. Play.

ARTICLE XXII

We give and bequeath to next year's News from North staff at least a dozen sensational school happenings with which to brighten the otherwise rather average pages of the Quincy Patriot Ledger.

ARTICLE XXIII

We give and bequeath to every harassed Junior the courage to remind his five subject teachers that state law declares it illegal for any individual to work more than forty-eight hours a week.

ARTICLE XXIV

We give and bequeath to Miss Crockett the government's emphatic assurance that the Selective Service Act will in no way affect the operation of her date bureau.

ARTICLE XXV

We give and bequeath to Mr. Christiansen a slide bearing the words "Three minute intermission due to technical difficulties" that we trust will be used very infrequently during the shows that the Motion Picture Operators' Club sponsors.

ARTICLE XXVI

We give and bequeath to all succeeding senior classes the happiness that has been ours at North, but we decree that said happiness be tempered by a few sorrows so that a more nearly perfect appreciation of North's advantages may be realized.

Signed, sealed, published, and declared by the Class of 1941 to be its Last Will and Testament which in our presence and we in its presence and in the presence of each other at its request subscribe our names hereto as witnesses:

GIRLS' CLUB

THIS year the Girls' Club adopted that one essential for a well-rounded life, hobbies, as its special project. Each of the officers selected a hobby in which she was particularly interested and attempted to get a certain number of club members to share her enthusiasm. In providing for numerous deserving families at Thanksgiving and Christmas, in arranging roller skating parties, and in planning the super special "Crystal Ball" this organization provided excellent opportunities for the development of different aptitudes. At informal entertainments girls who had hitherto kept their talents hidden were encouraged to display them, and many pleasant surprises often resulted for both entertainers and entertained. However, the biggest achievement of the year in point of school service was the sponsoring by the club of Hans Helm's appearance at three assemblies. Mr. Helm illustrated with his own cultivated abilities the value of perseverance in developing one's hobby and stimulated the schoolwide interest in hobbies.

YEARBOOK STAFF

THE Year Book Staff is that highly intelligent, extremely ingenious group responsible for this publication. As usual, the staff was divided into various groups. Our creative writers, potential rivals of Katherine Brush, burned the midnight oil in trying to originate ideas that might do away with the old clichés. The collecting of necessary statistics and the devising of senior questionnaires were duties of the mathematical minded. "Life" will undoubtedly be anxious to hire our candid camera fiends after they see some of the book's informal snaps, while McClelland Barelay will feel almost too discouraged to continue after casting a glance at the illustrations. Everyone feels that a great deal of our financial success was due to the advertising staff who so successfully visited our local merchants and obtained their promises for ads. And none of this would have been possible without assistance from the commercial members of the staff.

YEARBOOK STAFF

Although we reluctantly returned to school after Christmas holidays, being chosen for the staff dispelled our sorrows. Conferenees were held at which assignments were made, and we really began to work in earnest. At this time our finished product seemed almost a figment of our imagination. However, after discussions with Mr. Adler of Vantine's we had a clearer picture of what the final result would be. Soon, the horror of meeting a deadline east its ugly shadow over our peace of mind, but at last each line was written, checked, and the book was off to the printers.

Mr. Hofferty was our faculty adviser, and Miss Meisner had charge of the advertising. The members of the staff were:
